Another Great KL&L Convention

Another Key Lock & Lantern Convention is now in the history books, and it was great to get together with many of our members again, after over two years without an event. When we postponed the convention (for the third or fourth time) back in the spring, I was a little concerned about how it would go, with COVID still lingering and the potential for summertime schedule conflicts. A few of our regular participants were unable to come this year as a result, but attendance figures actually ended up slightly higher than at our last convention. It was obvious that many people were ready to get out of the house and attend an in-person event.

For me, the best part of the KL&L Convention is the opportunity to meet with fellow historians and collectors, in an environment that is a little less hectic than the big train shows. While there is a large amount of railroadiana for sale and to look at, there is plenty of time to see the show at a leisurely pace and visit with people as you go. Of course, it always helps to register for the entire weekend and do some early trading on Thursday or Friday. Most of my purchases were made right out of a car trunk on Thursday afternoon, and some rare stuff changed hands in the hotel courtyard on Friday night. The early bird still gets the worm!

When we moved the convention up the road to Carbondale, PA this year, I'll admit that I was skeptical about the new location. However, everyone was pleasantly surprised at how nice the Hotel Anthracite was, from the guest rooms, to the food in the restaurant, and the friendly service that they provided for our events. We had originally been bouncing some ideas around for rotating the convention out of the Scranton area, but the positive feedback that we received from participants has convinced us to return to the same venue for next year.

Our biggest convention, as far as attendance goes, was when we held it over Mother's Day weekend a few years ago. All formal activities took place on Friday and Saturday, so that people could head home early on Sunday for dinner, if they wished. And, since most other railroad organizations avoid that weekend for events, there were very few schedule conflicts with other meetings and shows. With this in mind, we have scheduled the next convention for May 5-8, 2022, at the Hotel Anthracite in Carbondale.

On another topic, membership renewal forms went out with the last issue of the KL&L magazine, for those members who were due to renew (some already renewed in advance, and therefore did not get a form). If you did receive a renewal form and have not returned it yet (or renewed on the KL&L website), please take a moment to do so. We have plenty of interesting material lined up for future issues of the magazine, and you won't want to miss out.

Once again, it was great to see some old friends at the convention and make a bunch of new ones. I hope that even more members will be able to attend next year's event. Until then, stay safe and healthy, and thanks for your support.

Key Lock & Lantern Holds the 2021 Convention (Finally!)

After numerous postponements, the combined 48th/49th annual Key Lock & Lantern Convention was finally held over the weekend of August 13-15, 2021 at the Hotel Anthracite in Carbondale, PA. Despite lingering concerns about the pandemic, and the possibility of summer schedule conflicts, it was a “now or next year” decision for the convention committee. Over two years had already passed since the last convention, so it was decided to go ahead and hold the event.

Fortunately, many members were eager to get together after only being able to attend virtual events for the past year, and the 2021 convention turned out to be a huge success. A few regular participants were unable to come, due to family or work obligations, and they were certainly missed. However, many people who have not attended in the past were able to make the trip to Carbondale, and there were plenty of new exhibitors at the show.

Almost 70 collectors and their family members registered in advance for the entire weekend, and over 40 more registered at the door for Saturday’s activities, for a total attendance figure of over 100 people. In addition to the many participants from the surrounding region, members traveled from Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Florida, and California to attend this year's convention. While buying and selling memorabilia is an important aspect of the convention, the opportunity to meet and share information with other railroad historians is what makes it such an enjoyable event.

This year, many members arrived early on Thursday, and there were plenty of "parking lot deals" made while boxes were being unloaded in the Hotel Anthracite garage. With no formal activities scheduled, there was plenty of time to visit nearby Steamtown, chase a train on the Delaware-Lackawanna Railroad, or check out some of the antique shops in Carbondale.

There was plenty of early trading on Friday night in the Hotel Anthracite courtyard. Dave Hamilton photo.

Friday turned out to be an excellent day for a train excursion, with warm and sunny weather, and only a chance of late-day showers and storms. Another informal gathering took place in the hotel lounge in the morning (with a few trips to fellow collectors' rooms for more trading), and then convention activities moved up the road to Honesdale, PA. Many attendees visited the Wayne County Historical Museum, with its exhibits on the Delaware & Hudson Canal, the local glass industry, and the region's general history. The replica of the Stourbridge Lion locomotive, constructed by the D&H for its centennial celebration, is the centerpiece of the museum's transportation display.

At 1:00pm, KL&L members climbed aboard the Stourbridge Line excursion train, which operates over former Erie Railroad Wyoming Division trackage. A table car was reserved for the exclusive use of KL&L passengers, allowing everyone to sit together and visit with both old friends and new. The line follows the Lackawaxen River, providing scenic views of the waterway and adjacent D&H Canal route for almost the entire trip. Originally, it was planned to cover the entire line to Lackawaxen, but track work necessitated a turn at Hawley, PA. This change turned out to be a good one, as passengers had the opportunity to visit some of the town's many antique shops and have something to eat at one of the local restaurants.

In the evening, many members enjoyed dinner at the Kol Steakhouse in the hotel, followed by an informal gathering at the bar. The festivities soon spilled out into the adjacent courtyard, where the day's antique shop finds were compared and additional memorabilia trading took place. One benefit of having this year's convention during the summer was that the warm weather was perfect for an outdoors evening of drinks, cigars, and railroad stories.

Brookline Continues Sale of Several New York & New England Railroadiana Collections

The Brookline Auction Gallery continued to sell railroadiana from several prominent New York and New England collections in its Spring 2021 auction, along with a variety of quality consignments. While there were a few deals to be found in the Friday afternoon session, most lots brought high bids that were consistent with their scarcity. The sale of these collections will continue in the Fall auction, to be held on October 1st and 2nd. All photos and prices realized courtesy of Scott Czaja at the Brookline Auction Gallery, and do not include buyer's premiums or shipping.

Rail & Road Auctions Offers Railroadiana From the Brain Maiher Collection & Consignments

After its most recent sales saw strong results for fine railroad art and memorabilia, Rail & Road Auctions featured artifacts from the Brian Maiher collection in its July 10th online auction. Brian collected railroadiana from the Midwest to New England, and the variety of material in the sale reflected his broad range of interests. Additional items from this collection will be sold in the upcoming November 13th auction, along with a variety of quality consignments. Photos and prices realized courtesy of Rail & Road Auctions and do not include buyers premiums or shipping.

Chesapeake & Ohio Historical Society Receives Major Archival Donation

Noted historian Thomas W. Dixon, Jr. has just donated his lifetime collection of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway-related photographs to the C&O Historical Society. This collection comprises between 25,000 and 30,000 images that were largely accumulated before the Alleghany County based non-profit organization had the capability to digitally scan photos and archival materials. The historical photographs from the Dixon donation were taken by a wide variety of people and come from many sources.

An author who has completed approximately 39 titles, Dixon says that he collected these images and used them in publications over the years, including works for the C&O Historical Society. However, they remained in his ownership because the Society previously did not have a good way to catalog and index large amounts of images.

Now, over a decade into operating a robust digital index accessible at <https://archives.cohs.org>, the C&OHS's Business Office & Archives has a well-established archival capability within its Clifton Forge-based headquarters. He said his donated photographs "...need to be positioned in the Society's collection and owned physically so that they can be preserved for the future. The photos can be scanned, indexed, and conserved as needed in publications and as resources permit. This is much better than leaving them in my personal possession. I hope this will serve as an example for others with collections of photos to donate them to the Society for long-term preservation and even more importantly, current and future use."

The images are from all eras of C&O Railway operations, particularly heavy in equipment (locomotives and cars), as well as railroad stations and structures. Some of the photos already have been catalogued and entered in the Society collection through digital scanning in the past ten years. This donation now transfers the remainder.

The collection was formally accepted by C&OHS Vice President Clifford L. Clements on August 27. The pictures are now stored in the Society's archival department at 312 E. Ridgeway Street in Clifton Forge. Clements said, "They now form a new part of the Society's large collection of C&O-related material. The Society's collections are used not only for our own publications, but by a wide variety of institutions and entities all over the country and the world. In recent years, we have provided material to such organizations as the Smithsonian Institution, United Nations, the U.S. Postal Service, BBC, Brookings Institution, A&E and the History Channels, and hundreds more."

The C&O Historical Society is the largest and most active of over 70 organizations that study individual railroads. It is the only one with a full-time paid staff to assist inquirers on a daily basis and has a high reputation among the railroad history community for its service to members and the public.

A central part of its activities is its frequent publication of a high-quality, bimonthly magazine and numerous history books that document many aspects of the C&O Railway's operations and how they associate with the overall history of the railway experience. It also operates a highly-acclaimed museum at the C&O Heritage Center, also in Clifton Forge, where former C&O cars and locomotives, as well as other artifacts, help tell the story of the railway.

The Society may be reached by phone at 540-862-2210, weekdays 9 AM to 4 PM, or by e-mail at cohs@cohs.org. Its website (<http://cohs.org>) focuses on general history and archival collections, ChessieShop.com for over 2,000 sales items, and <http://cohs.org/heritage> for museum operations. The C&O Historical Society and C&O Railway Heritage Center can also be found on Facebook at facebook.com/COHS.org and facebook.com/CandOHeritage.

Regarding the importance of becoming an official member of the 52-year-old historical society, Clements added, "We need new members to help us with the large and important effort of preserving the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway's history. Newly-joined Society members at the $45 level not only receive the 48-page bimonthly magazine and discounts on all sales items, but will receive four free railroad history books, valued at $120. For more information or to join us in this effort, please contact us or go to ChessieShop.com and click 'Membership.'"

On Saturday, the convention's main event – the Transportation History Exposition – was held in the Hotel Anthracite's banquet hall. Fifty tables had been arranged for the show, and they all sold out fairly early this year. Exhibits included memorabilia from local lines such as the D&H and the Lackawanna, early Amtrak timetables, and a Penn Central train dispatcher's CTC panel. An impressive collection of rare and early passes from railroads of New York and Pennsylvania was displayed, along with another excellent exhibit by Joe Bokanoski of The Antique Lantern, this year highlighting the Nail City Lantern Company.

While all of the exhibits deserve recognition, the votes by attendees gave the "Best in Show" award to Bill Moll, for his nicely arranged display of badges, memorabilia, and the dispatcher's board.

Of course, in addition to the "exhibit only" artifacts, there were many tables of all types of railroadiana for sale or trade. Several members are in the process of thinning out their collections, and there was plenty of fresh material that had not been previously offered anywhere else. Timetable collector Gary Betz brought a huge selection of paper, uniform supplier Paul Yorkis offered a variety of original badges and buttons, and lantern collectors had a wide selection to choose from at The Antique Lantern's table. From $1 timetables to four-figure lanterns, there was something for everyone at the show.

Society. Pat McKnight from Steamtown was unable to attend this year, as the National Park Service had sent him out west to help fight wildfires – probably the only railroad museum official to have those duties as part of his job description!

In the afternoon, the annual membership meeting of Key Lock & Lantern was held, followed by the annual fundraiser sale. Despite the fact that several of the members who are regular donors were not able to attend this year, the tables were filled with all kinds of railroadiana, including china, equipment manuals, keys, locks, lanterns, and timetables. As always, the auction-style sale was fun event, with plenty of good deals to be found, and all proceeds going to support the activities of KL&L.

In the evening, members returned to the banquet hall for a delicious buffet dinner, followed by railroad history lectures. Continuing his virtual tour of the Ontario & Western facilities in the Scranton area that began at the 2018 convention, O&W Society member Walt Kierzkowski returned to show images of the railroad around Carbondale. Dr. Robert Powell of the Carbondale Historical Society then presented an excellent overview of the D&H Gravity Railroad. Everyone enjoyed the programs, both of which provided plenty of ideas for the exploration of historic sites on the following day.

Dozens of lanterns and replacement parts were offered for sale by The Antique Lantern. Dave Hamilton photo.

The hotel breakfast room was filled with KL&L members on Sunday morning, with long conversations and extra cups of coffee causing a last-minute scramble at checkout time. Many of those who were heading home had plans to take the back roads and stop at antique shops that had been passed on the way to the convention. Others took advantage of the many railfanning opportunities in the area, and had train chasing trips planned for the afternoon. Many who brought railroadiana to sell found an equal amount to buy, and went home with the car still loaded – just with different things!

Overall, convention attendees were very pleased with the hotel facilities and the availability of related activities in the area, so the committee has made arrangements to return to Carbondale next year. The 2022 KL&L Convention will once again be held at the Hotel Anthracite in Carbondale, PA, on May 5-8, 2022. Formal events will be scheduled for Friday and Saturday, to allow people who wish to get home for Mother's Day dinner to leave early on Sunday without missing anything. Announcements will be made on the KL&L website when event schedules are determined and registration is open.
